Introduction

This is a companion list to the Sandy Denny Song List.

At the start (after this introduction) is a summary of all releases included in this list.

This list references most releases that I know of, and that I have track information for. Most of these I own, a few I don't. I have included song timings for the releases that I have. Songs are timed from first note to last.

Releases are numbered. This numbering is arbitrary, but provides a handle for quickly searching out a particular release. Releases are ordered roughly chronologically by release date, although for early recordings, guest appearances, bootlegs, and private tapes/discs, the ordering is chronological by recording date. Numbering uses a "P" prefix for Pre-Fairport releases; "F" for official Fairport (and related) releases, including Fotheringay and The Bunch; "SD" for solo releases, "V" for various-artists compilations and retrospective releases by particular artists, "G" for releases by other artists with Sandy as guest; "S" for singles and EPs, "B" for bootleg releases, and "T" for private CD-Rs and tapes.

Dates are usually written out in full, but if there are a few given by just numbers, they are in U.S. format (mm/dd/yy).

Reinhard Zierke's website also provides huge amounts of information about releases, and contains many details on releases and songs that are valuable:

<http://www.informatik.uni-hamburg.de/~zierke/sandy.denny/>

Ian Rennie's "Expletive Delighted" site contains a great deal of information on the different releases of each album and was also valuable:

<http://www.musikfolk.co.uk/expletive-delighted/index.html>

The layout of this list is by release, given within each section generally in chronological order by release date, although there are some exceptions (for instance, expanded reissues are listed after the original albums). The ordering is different for the "T" (private tapes / CD-Rs) section, where generally releases are chronological by recording date.

For those releases I have copies of, song timings are given. For releases for which I do not have copies, the releases are still listed, but without song timings. Since timings can vary on different releases of the same album, I underline the catalog number of the release from which the listed timings are taken.

I distinguish here between tracks that have no involvement by Sandy and those that do. If Sandy had no involvement, the song is listed in italics. My definition of "involvement" is that Sandy was in a group (e.g., Fairport or Fotheringay) at the time, even if she did not perform on every song on an album or at a concert. For instance, a release might have a version of "Dirty Linen" by Fairport from 1971, which would be listed in italics indicating not involving Sandy. But the same song performed at a concert in 1975, when she was in the group, would not be listed in italics.

For songs that do involve Sandy, an index number is given after the song name in parentheses (), which is a shorthand way of referring to that particular version of a song. Thus Book Song (2) is the version of that song recorded on 27 December 1968 for BBC radio. Each song has every performance or mix identified by a different number, running from (1) to however many versions of that song I know of.

The index numbers have initially been assigned chronologically; however, live performances are numbered last in the sequence. The order of these numbers isn't important, and new numbers will be assigned out of order. They should just be treated as a unique identifier for a particular version of a song. A new index number is allocated for each performance of a song, and also for different mixes of the same performance. The idea is to be as complete as possible in describing all different versions of every song.

Official compilation releases are generally excluded, except for a few cases where some material had its first release there (or first official CD release). The same applies for official "various artists" anthology releases, with the same exception.

The "Singles and EPs" category includes all singles by all artists on which Sandy participates. Like the rest of the categories, this one is not complete; but I'll continue to add entries as I get information.

Private CD-Rs and tapes are included, but only the ones I have. So this section may not be of great use to others. However, with the advent of mass trading via CD-R or internet, more private releases are circulating under a uniform name, so this section may be of more use to other people now than it used to be.

The companion Song List doc gives some basic information on each version of each song covered here.

Finally, I try to update this list as new information becomes available - it's always evolving. There are collectors' tapes that I don't yet have. I hope to include more in later versions.

4. RETROSPECTIVES, COMPILATIONS & VARIOUS-ARTISTS RELEASES

A note on the BBC Transcription Discs:

These were produced from previously broadcasted BBC radio recordings and were shipped out to overseas markets for radio play. Since the BBC normally erased tape masters after a time (much to archivists' dismay) these LPs are often the only surviving copies of these radio recordings. The LPs were issued with an "expiry date" on which the LPs were supposed to be destroyed by the recipient radio stations, although fortunately many copies have survived. This expiry date was 6 months after release up to mid-1970, at which time it was changed to one year after release.

The series relevant to Sandy Denny was the "Top of the Pops" series, not to be confused with the BBC-TV show of the same name. These LPs included introductions and interviews by Brian Matthew. A parallel series "Pick of the Pops" did not have the intros and outros by Matthew, although they included some of his interviews. These were designed for radio stations that wanted their own DJ to do any intros and comments on the music. This second series was numbered in parallel to the "Top of the Pops" series; it appears that a given number included most of the same artists for both series, but the selection of songs was generally different. I'm uncertain how many TotP numbers also exist in PotP form; I've found PotP LPs starting in late 1969, but not prior to that.
